Summary of policy

- The Changing Your Study Plans Policy document is in two parts.
- The first part sets out The Open University’s policy about the options that you have as a student if you want to change the modules and/or qualification that you are studying, take a break from study, or withdraw from your studies with The Open University.
- The second part of the document explains the rules and procedures for each option and indicates potential financial or academic consequences.
- At every stage, you can contact your Student Support Team (SST) if you would like or need to talk to an advisor. Contact details are given in Section 8.

Summary of significant changes since 2019/20 version

- Update to the Scope section to clarify that non-credit bearing Short Course students are not in scope.

Policies and documents superseded by this edition

- Changing Your Study Plans Policy 2019/20 version 1.0

Scope

What this policy covers

This policy applies to qualifications and modules starting from the Academic Year 2020/21, i.e. after 1 August 2020 until this version is withdrawn. This policy applies to you if you fall into any of the categories below:

- Enquirers (for information only)
- All undergraduate and postgraduate taught students studying a module and/or a qualification except for apprentices
- Students in prison, secure units and secure hospitals and those released on licence (Secure Environments).
What this policy does not cover

This policy does not apply to:

- Postgraduate research students: you should contact the Research Degrees Team for options for changing your study plans
- Apprentices: you should contact your named Apprenticeship Programme Delivery Manager (APDM) for further discussion. Your APDM will discuss the implications of changing your study plans with you and your employer
- Students studying a non-credit bearing Short Course: you should refer to the Conditions of Registration (Short Courses) 2020/21
- Students studying a Microcredential via the FutureLearn platform.

This policy does not cover exam and end of module assessment postponement or resits/resubmissions. If you need information about policy and procedure relating to postponement or resits/resubmissions, see the Assessment Handbook.

The Open University Student Charter Principles

This policy aligns with the following OU Student Charter Principles:

- Principle 2: We aim to inspire and enable learning
- Principle 3: We share the responsibility of learning
Introduction

This document sets out The Open University’s policy on helping you change your study plans to achieve your learning goals. It tells you the options that you have for making an appropriate change, the rules and procedures for cancelling your enrolment or registration, for making changes to your current or planned study, for taking a break from study or for withdrawing from your studies with The Open University. Further support and individual guidance to help you make appropriate choices is available from your SST.

Unfamiliar terms are explained in a glossary of terms at the end of this document.

Policy

1. Purpose

The Open University recognises that you may need to change your study plans to support your personal circumstances. The Open University is committed to helping you achieve your study goals by offering options for changing how or what you study and sufficient advice and guidance for you to make well-informed decisions. This policy supports that commitment.

1.1 The objectives of this policy are to:

1.1.1 Explain your legal right to cancel enrolment or registration.

1.1.2 Set out your options for changing your study plans.

1.1.3 Identify the potential financial and academic implications of these options.

1.1.4 Explain the procedure for each option.

2. Policy principles

2.1 The principles behind this policy are:

2.1.1 The Open University recognises that personal circumstances impact students’ study plans and students need to study flexibly at a pace that suits their needs.

2.1.2 The Open University is committed to giving students the information, advice and guidance they need to be able to choose the best study solution for their particular circumstances.

2.1.3 The Open University recognises your legal rights as a consumer.
2.1.4 Students and The Open University working in partnership to make decisions are most likely to achieve a successful outcome for students.

2.1.5 The Open University is committed to enabling students to achieve their study goals. It will do its best to help you find a solution that allows you to do this.

3. Study Options available for changing your study plans

This section contains a brief description of each of the options available for changing your study plans. Each definition has a link to the corresponding section that then outlines the rules and procedure associated with that option in greater detail.

3a) Cancel enrolment or registration (5a)
You have a statutory right to cancel your registration or enrolment to study a module and/or qualification, without giving any reason, within the statutory cancellation period.

3b) Withdraw from a module (5b)
This option allows you to cease studying a module without the intention to resume study of that module.

3c) Suspend study of a module (defer) (5c)
You can temporarily suspend your study of a module (defer) by withdrawing (5b) and re-registering on a future presentation.

3d) Change to a different module (5d)
This means you stop studying one module and change to another.

3e) Reduce or increase the number of modules you are studying (5e)
You can reduce the number of modules you are studying by withdrawing or suspending study (deferring) from modules. You can increase the number of modules you are studying by registering or enrolling on additional modules.

3f) Change or withdraw from the qualification you are studying towards (5f)
You can change the qualification you are studying towards, including changing to a qualification of a different level.
3g) Include or exclude a module from a qualification (5g)
You can count your module credit towards a qualification at any time. If you are enrolled for a module you wish to continue to study, but want to cancel your qualification registration or declaration, you may do so and study that module on a standalone basis. You may also exclude an individual module you are studying from your qualification.

3h) Stop studying temporarily (taking a study break) (5h)
You can take a break for a full academic year (1 August until 31 July). This means you do not register or enrol on further modules for that year.

3i) Stop studying permanently (5i)
If you stop studying and do not intend to undertake any further study with The Open University, you can withdraw from your module and/or qualifications and cease to be a student of The Open University.

4. Where to go for further information
Section 5 of this document provides procedures for the available options for changing your study plans. If you would like to talk to someone about your study options, please contact your Student Support Team (SST) to talk to an advisor. Your SST phone number and email contact can be found on StudentHome or on the Help Centre Your contacts.

Rules and Procedures

5. Study Change Options
This section sets out the rules and procedures that apply to each study change option. It also indicates whether there are any academic or financial implications you should consider before making a decision.

5a) Rules and Procedures to cancel enrolment or registration
5.1 Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013, you have a right to cancel your registration or enrolment to study a module and/or qualification, without giving any reason, within 14 days of the date of the email or letter confirming The Open University’s acceptance of your application to register or enrol (“the Cancellation Period”). You are not required to return or pay for any goods, such as course materials, that may have been sent to you during the cancellation period.
5.2 Non-credit bearing Short Courses are not within the scope of this document, and your right to cancel your registration will come to an end as soon as you have accessed the online teaching or assessment materials or other course resources, even if less than the 14 day limit. By accessing those materials and resources, you are explicitly agreeing that they are provided to you at that time and acknowledging that your right to cancel will be lost if you access them. See Conditions of Registration (Short Courses) 2020/21 for further detail.

5.3 Cancellation of a module and/or qualification enrolment or registration can only happen before the start date of that module. To cancel your enrolment or registration, you must inform The Open University of your decision by letter, email or telephone before the 14-day statutory cancellation period has expired. The statement must include your name, your Open University Personal Identifier (PI) Number, the module and/or qualification name and codes, for the module(s) and/or qualification you wish to cancel. If you send a letter, obtain proof of posting to confirm the date that you sent it.

5.4 The Open University will acknowledge receipt of your cancellation request by e-mail or letter within 10 working days. If you have not heard from us by then, you should contact your SST. This information is also highlighted in the confirmation of your registration or enrolment for study at The Open University.

Effect of cancellation:

5.5 The Open University will cancel your registration or enrolment for the module(s) and/or qualification that you have told us you want to cancel. If you cancel, you will receive a full refund or waiver for the fees you have agreed to pay for your study. You will not be liable to pay any further fees for that study.

5.6 If you have told The Open University that you intended to pay for your studies with a tuition fee loan, tuition fee grant, or a loan through Open University Student Budget Accounts Limited (OUSBA), The Open University will inform the appropriate body that you have cancelled your study.

Consequences of cancellation:

5.7 You will not be able to study or continue to study the module(s) and/or qualification that you have cancelled. NOTE: If you have registered or enrolled to study more than one module and you have not cancelled all of the modules for which you are enrolled or registered, you will still be able to study those other modules and you will remain liable to pay the fees and other charges for those modules.
5b) Rules and Procedures to withdraw from a module (withdrawal)

5.8 The Open University strongly recommends that you speak to your tutor (for academic guidance only, not policy guidance) or to the subject specialists in your SST who can offer advice and guidance on getting your study back on track and your options if you need to stop studying. They can ensure that you have explored all your options for changing your study plans, including taking advantage of the credit you have already gained or banking your assessment for the current module, if eligible.

5.9 Withdrawn modules count as modules which have not been successfully completed for the purposes of the University’s Academic Progress Policy.

5.10 To withdraw from a module, you must inform your SST by telephone, letter or email that you would like to withdraw. Withdrawal can only take place after the end of the cancellation period and before the final deferral date.

5.11 For undergraduate students liable for a standard fee, students in UK nations who are part of a cohort for whom part-time tuition fee loans are available, postgraduate students in Scotland funding their studies with a tuition fee loan and all postgraduate students in Northern Ireland, your withdrawal will take effect from either the date on which you contacted us to withdraw or the date on which you last actively participated in your studies, whichever is earliest. Activities used to assess participation in your studies may include:

- Logging in to your module website;
- Submitting work for assessment;
- Attending an examination or End of Module Assessment (EMA) or
- Confirming to us that you are studying in response to any contact from us in which you are offered support for your studies.

5.12 For undergraduate students in Scotland, undergraduate students studying under transitional arrangements in Wales and postgraduate students in all study areas except Northern Ireland, your request will take effect on the date the SST receive your phone call, letter or email. Please note that withdrawals cannot be made by webchat.
5.13 Retain proof of posting to confirm your withdrawal request if it was sent by post. Once The Open University has processed your withdrawal, it will confirm this in writing, by letter or email, within 10 working days. If you have not heard from The Open University by then, contact your SST.

5.14 Please refer to the Fee Rules for the academic year of the module from which you are withdrawing to check your eligibility and key deadlines for any fee refund, fee waiver or fee credit. The Fee Rules include guidance on eligibility for discretionary fee credit.

5c) Rules and procedures to suspend study of a module (deferral)

5.15 You can suspend study of a module (defer) after the end of the cancellation period, and before the final deferral date. You will need to withdraw (see section 5b) from the current presentation of your module and then re-register on a later presentation of that module. Inform your SST that you want to do this by phone, letter or email.

5.16 If it is not possible for you to enrol or register onto a future presentation of your module at the time of withdrawal from your current presentation, you will need to contact your SST to enrol or register when registration for that future module becomes available and before the final enrolment date.

5.17 To be eligible to use a fee credit, you must return to study within 13 months of the start date of the presentation of the module you withdrew from. Please refer to the Fee Rules for the academic year of the module from which you are withdrawing from to check your eligibility and deadlines for any fee credit.

5.18 If you are registered on a qualification and you cannot complete all the necessary study before the qualification completion date, you will not be able to complete that qualification, so a deferral may be unsuitable. You can discuss alternatives and options with your SST. Your qualification completion date is displayed in Your Record in StudentHome.

5.19 You cannot suspend study (defer) by withdrawing and re-registering if:

- it is beyond the final deferral date or you are completing a resit of the examination or re-submission of the End of Module Assessment (EMA); or

- the module you are studying is in its final year of presentation.
5.20 Some modules offer the option of assessment banking to students who suspend study (defer). This means that you keep the scores from assessments you have already completed, carry these forward to a future presentation of the same module that starts within 13 months of your original module presentation and complete the outstanding assessment requirements of that future presentation. You should check with your SST if the module you are studying provides this option, and should read the Assessment Banking Rules carefully, noting the implications of taking up this option, before letting them know you would like to apply for assessment banking.

5.21 You cannot apply to enrol or register to resume a module with assessment banking if the module has already started unless a late registration is approved by your SST.

5.22 Please refer to the Fee Rules for the academic year of the module from which you are withdrawing to check deadlines and your eligibility for any fee refund or fee credit, including guidance on eligibility for Discretionary Fee Credits.

5d) Rules and Procedure to Change to a different module

5.23 The rules below set out how you change to a different module, depending on the timing that applies to you.

Before Final Enrolment Date

5.24 You may change your module at any time up to the final enrolment date. If you are studying a module as part of a qualification, you will need to take any requirements of your qualification such as compulsory modules or study order into account.

After Final Enrolment Date and before module start date

5.25 You cannot normally change your choice of module or apply to study additional modules after the final enrolment date has passed. If you believe you have exceptional reasons for missing the final enrolment date, contact your SST to discuss your options. In exceptional circumstances, your SST may be able to approve a late registration.

5.26 Requests to change to a different module will only be considered up to 28 calendar days after the module start date. If your request to change is accepted, the change will be treated for fee liability purposes as having been made on the day before the module start date. Changes of this type are limited to one per module presentation period.
5.27 Subject to availability, a request to change a module enrolment or registration will be approved if it is made following the notification of a fail result for a previous module and that notification is received after the final enrolment date and not more than 28 calendar days after the module start date.

5.28 To change your choice of module, you must inform your SST by phone, letter or email. You must clearly state which module you would like to replace, which module you would like to replace it with and the presentation you want the change to apply to. Your request will take effect on the date your SST receive your phone call, letter or email.

5e) Rules and Procedure to reduce or increase the number of modules you are studying

5.29 To reduce the number of modules you are studying outside the 14 day cancellation period (as set out in Section 5a), you may withdraw from a module as per Section 5b). Withdrawing from a module may impact on your ability to complete your qualification within any specified time limits for completion of qualifications. Withdrawn modules count as modules which have not been successfully completed for the purposes of the Academic Progress Regulation of the Academic Policy.

5.30 If you want to increase the number of modules you are studying, you may do this by registering or enrolling on additional modules in later presentations when they are available for registration or enrolment. You must not exceed the study limits set out in the Academic Regulations or the fee limits set out in the Fee Rules, if applicable.

5.31 To study additional modules within the same presentation, contact your SST. If it is after the final enrolment date, registration or enrolment of any additional module will be subject to the availability of places and the approval of a late registration.

5f) Rules and Procedures to change or withdraw from the qualification you are studying towards NB: Please note that this option is to change your qualification only. To change the module(s) you are currently studying, please see Section 5d).

5.32 You can change the qualification you are studying towards at any time. To do this, your new qualification must be available for registration or declaration, you must satisfy any specified entry requirements and be able to complete the qualification within any specified time limit. If you are receiving a loan or a grant you will also need to notify the loan or grant provider and the change of qualification may affect your eligibility.
5.33 To change your qualification, you need to inform your SST. They will advise you of your options, including whether you can use some or all of your existing module credit or current study towards a new qualification.

5g) Rules and Procedures to include or exclude a module from a qualification

5.34 If you have been studying module(s) on a standalone basis and decide that you would like to start counting your module credit towards a qualification, you may do so at any time. The qualification must be available for registration or declaration, you must satisfy any specified entry requirements and be able to complete the qualification within any specified time limit. If you are a module-only student and have not yet chosen your next module, go to your Study Record page on StudentHome and click on ‘choose next modules’. Alternatively, contact your SST for guidance.

5.35 If you want to declare or register for a qualification and count module credit towards that qualification, or wish to remove modules from a registered or declared qualification, you should contact your SST by phone, letter or email. Your request will take effect within 5 working days of the date on which the SST receive your request.

5.36 For all students, if you are enrolled for a module you wish to continue to study, but want to cancel your qualification registration or declaration, you may do so and study that module on a standalone basis. You may also exclude an individual module you are studying from your qualification. The Open University recommends that you check that this will not have an impact on the way your module is funded or any funding you may be receiving directly.

5.37 If you remove a module from your qualification at undergraduate level (or postgraduate (PG) in Northern Ireland) and are paying by loan, The Open University will ask for an alternative payment method. If you remove a module from your qualification at PG level and are in receipt of a PG loan, you will no longer be eligible for a PG Loan (England and Wales). Contact your SST to do this.

5h) Rules and Procedures to stop studying with The Open University temporarily (study break)

5.38 To achieve an Open University qualification, you do not normally need to study continuously. A break of an academic year or more from your studies is referred to as a study break. This means you do not enrol on, register for, or begin to study on any modules starting in that academic year. A study break is either approved or unapproved, depending on whether you inform your SST about your intention or not. Your registration as a student of The Open University will lapse if you do not register for a module or qualification within two consecutive academic years, unless you have applied for an approved study break. If your registration lapses, The Open University will reassess your fee scheme and funding regime if you return to study.

5.39 There is no limit to the number of one-year study breaks you can take. However, the time taken for a study break, whether approved or unapproved, counts towards the time limit within which a qualification must be achieved. There are some qualifications with short time limits, for example for professional recognition, or where the qualification is being withdrawn. Your personal time limit for completing a qualification is calculated from the start of the earliest module you are counting credit from, or the date of any credit awarded in recognition of prior learning. If you have credit awarded in recognition of prior learning on a registered qualification, you will have a reduced time limit for completion of the credits still to complete. Consult the Academic Regulations for further information.

5.40 In some cases, therefore, the opportunity for a study break may be very limited or not available. It is always best to seek advice from your SST before deciding to take a study break.

5.41 To temporarily stop studying (take a study break) if you are currently studying a module, you should formally withdraw or suspend study from the module you are studying as per 5b) or 5c) in addition to notifying your SST of your intention to take a study break.

5.42 If you do not enrol or register for a module within two successive academic years, you will automatically cease to be a student of The Open University, unless you have extended this period with approved study breaks.

Approved study break

5.43 An approved study break can be requested during or before the academic year in which the study break is to commence. The advantages of an approved study break are that:

- The Open University will be able to take account of your plans in our communications with you and ensure that you continue to receive appropriate information in relation to your planned study.

- Approved study breaks are excluded from the period of two consecutive academic years without registration after which the University will withdraw your registration as a student of the University.
• If you are registered on a qualification, during your study break you can access relevant services associated with the qualification as well as services provided to all students of The Open University.

5.44 To apply for an approved study break, notify your SST by phone, letter or email. They will provide you with advice about the impact your decision may have on your study aims, including on professional recognition. You will be asked to confirm that you have received that advice and your SST will record your study break on your student record. You can return to study at any time before the agreed end of a study break by enrolling or registering for a module. The study break will cease automatically as soon as you do this.

5.45 You can extend your approved study break for one additional academic year at a time. To do this, before the end of an approved study break, you should apply to your SST for an extension of the current study break, as per the process in paragraph 5.41.

Unapproved study break

5.46 You can take a study break of one academic year without seeking any approval. An unapproved break means that The Open University will not be aware that you intend to stop study in that academic year. The disadvantages of an unapproved study break are:

• You may not receive information that is appropriate for or relevant to your situation and plans.

• You may not be included in important communications about changes that might affect your future study.

• An unapproved study break will count towards the period after which The Open University will withdraw your registration as a student.

• If you take more than one unapproved study break within any one continuous period of study breaks, you will no longer be a registered student. If you take an unapproved study break at the end of an approved study break, rather than applying to extend, you will lose the advantages of being on an approved break.
5i) Rules and procedure to stop studying with The Open University permanently

5.47 The Open University strongly recommends that you speak to your tutor (for academic guidance only, not policy guidance) or to your SST who can offer advice and guidance before you make this decision.

5.48 When you withdraw from study, The Open University will retain your academic study record and details of any module credit that you have been awarded. You may, if you are eligible, apply to study with The Open University at a later date. Any subsequent registration will be under the Conditions of Registration regulations which apply to a student commencing their studies at that time.

5.49 If you no longer want to be a student of The Open University, you should inform your SST by phone, letter or email, making it clear whether you are currently studying any modules or qualifications. Your request will take effect on the date the SST receives your request. The Open University will acknowledge receipt of your request by e-mail or letter within 10 working days.

5.50 If you withdraw from The Open University before you have completed the modules for which you are registered at the time, you may be eligible for a fee credit or a fee refund as set out in the current Fee Rules. This also contains key deadlines. Withdrawal from The Open University does not lead to the cancellation of fee credits towards future study. If you decide to return to study during the period of validity (13 months) of any fee credit, you may be able to use that credit towards the fees for further study.

5.51 If you do not enrol or register for a module within two successive academic years, you will automatically cease to be a student of The Open University, unless you have had a study break approved through the procedure in Section 5h.

6. Non-compliance

If you do not tell The Open University about changing your study plans, it will not be able to provide you with appropriate information, advice and guidance. If you stop studying a module but do not tell us that you are doing this (withdrawing), you may continue to be liable for fees, will not be eligible for any fee credits and will receive a fail-absent result when module results are released. This may have an impact on your academic progress. Consult the Academic Regulations and the Academic Progress Policy for further information about the Academic Progress Regulations.
7. Methods of appeal

If you have a query or a problem with any aspect of how we apply this policy, you are encouraged to contact us promptly so that we can try to put things right. We may not always be able to meet your expectations and we hope that you will understand why that is the case. If you feel that we have not responded appropriately to your policy query or concern, you can raise a formal complaint or appeal using the Students Complaints and Appeals Procedure.

8. Further Information

8.1 If you are considering changing what you have planned to study, you will find more information and support to help you with your decision including any academic implications if you follow the ‘Changes and problems while you study’ link via your StudentHome Help Centre.

8.2 The Open University recommends that you talk to your SST before taking action to change your study plans. This is likely to result in the best solution for you.

8.3 If you would like specific advice about fees, you can also contact Student Fees, or, if you are a student in Northern Ireland, the Republic of Ireland, Scotland or Wales, your nation office for further information.

Glossary of terms in this document

Academic Year

The academic year starts on 1 August each calendar year and ends on 31 July.

Assessment Banking

This means that when you defer you keep the scores from assessments you have already completed, carry these forward to a future presentation of the same module, and complete the outstanding assessment requirements within that future presentation. You should refer to your module website to check if the module you are studying provides this option, and to the Assessment Banking Rules.

Cancellation period

Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013, you have a right to cancel your registration to study a module and/or qualification, without giving any reason, within 14 days of the date of the email or letter confirming The Open University’s acceptance of your application to register (“the Cancellation Period”).

Non-credit bearing Short Courses are not within the scope of this document, and your right to cancel your registration will come to an end as soon as you have accessed the online teaching or assessment materials or other course resources, even if less than the 14 day limit. By accessing those materials and resources, you are explicitly agreeing that they are provided to you at that time and acknowledging that your right to cancel will be lost if you access them. See Conditions of Registration (Short Courses) 2020/21 for further detail.

Count credit to a qualification

If you are studying a declared qualification you can count the modules that you study and are awarded credit for towards this qualification. Credit from standalone modules will not be counted for qualification purposes unless you have told us that you want this module to be counted in your qualification.
Declared qualifications

A declared qualification is a qualification that you have told us that you are studying towards and to which you are counting the modules that you study and are awarded credit for.

Declared undergraduate qualifications were the qualifications offered prior to 2012 and withdrawn with effect from 31 December 2017, or 31 December 2019 for declared Open Qualifications. If you did not complete a declared qualification before its withdrawal, you may be able to count some or all of your credit towards a registered qualification. Contact your SST if you would like further information.

All postgraduate certificates, diplomas and Master’s degrees are declared qualifications.

Enrolment

Enrolment is the process by which a student who is registered for a qualification is allocated to a module which will be studied as part of that qualification.

Fee Credit

A fee credit is an amount of money that is awarded by the OU that can be offset against the fee of a future presentation of the same module or, in some circumstances, a different module.

Final deferral date (FDD)

The final deferral date is the last working day before you sit the examination or submit the final end-of-module assessment (EMA) or for modules which do not have an end of module assessment, the last working day before the submission deadline for the final piece of assessed work.

Final enrolment date (FED)

The Final Enrolment Date is the last date that a reservation can be made for a module in a specific presentation period. It will be published in the online prospectus in the module description and on StudentHome.

Late registration

Module registrations are not normally considered after the final enrolment date (FED). Your SST may consider individual cases for late registration.
Module
A module is a self-contained unit of teaching, learning and assessment which may be studied as a standalone course or in combination to form qualifications. Each module, other than a Short Course, is assigned a credit value and a level of study.

Module Credit
Each module is assigned a credit value, which is related to the workload required to successfully complete it. One credit represents about 10 hours of study. You will be awarded credits when you successfully complete a module, so if you pass a 60-credit module you will be awarded 60 credits. Some modules have a zero-credit value.

Module Start date
This is the date on which teaching of a module officially begins. There may be communication or access to learning facilities before this date. You will be informed of the Module Start Date when you enrol on a module.

Postponement
If you cannot attend your module examination or submit your end of module assessment, including an exam, due to circumstances beyond your control, such as illness or bereavement, and you can provide third party documentary evidence of those circumstances, you may be exceptionally permitted to postpone the end of module assessment, including an exam to the next opportunity for your module. This process is called Discretionary Postponement. If you are offered a resit which is scheduled within twelve to sixteen weeks of your original exam period, you can elect to postpone this ‘early’ resit exam to the next available opportunity, this process is called Elective Postponement. Policy and procedures for both types of postponement are provided in the Assessment Handbook.

Presentation
A presentation is the period of time between module start and end dates. Presentations are referred to by their first month e.g. a module that is presented from February to October is a February presentation.

Recognition of Prior Certificated Learning (Credit Transfer)
If you have previously studied elsewhere and your studies were completed at the same academic level as Open University modules, we may be able to award you credit towards an Open University qualification. This will allow you to use your previous study instead of completing some of the modules required through The Open University Credit awarded in recognition of prior certificated learning may be awarded with restrictions and if that is the case, these will be set out in the award confirmation. Credit awarded in this way will not count towards the classification requirements of any classified award unless it is collaborative scheme credit, described below.

Registered qualification
A registered qualification is an undergraduate qualification that you have formally registered to study and that you have enrolled on modules for and are counting credit towards.

Registered student
You will be a student of The Open University for the purposes of this policy if you are currently registered for a qualification or, if you are not registered for a qualification, you are either currently registered for a module or you have studied a module in either of the previous two academic years.

Registration
Registration is the process by which you become a student of The Open University. To register you must agree to the Conditions of Registration, signalling your intention to study one or more modules or qualifications, and make or arrange payment for your studies.

Standalone Module
A module that is not linked to a qualification.

Time limits for completion of qualifications
If you are studying a registered qualification, the time limit specified for your qualification is included in the qualification regulations available on your StudentHome or available on the qualification website.

If you are studying an undergraduate declared qualification, there may not be a separate time limit but the withdrawal date of the qualification by which time you must complete is included in the qualification regulations, available on your StudentHome.

If you are studying a postgraduate qualification, any time limit which is applicable to your qualification is included in the qualification regulations, available on your StudentHome.
