Introduction

1. The Information, Advice and Guidance (IAG) Service

1.1 The purpose of the IAG Service is to support you in achieving your aspirations including your study and career goals, whether you are considering studying with The Open University, or are already a student.

   Information: is a range of resource material available online that is presented in a way that encourages self-assessment and independent decision making whilst also delivering factual data. Information is also provided by staff who will direct enquirers and students to relevant resources. Staff will use a variety of questioning techniques to gain an understanding of requirements and individual circumstances. Staff will signpost enquirers and students to more specialist support where needed.

   Advice: is the process of supporting enquirers and students to reach informed decisions by discussing their options. Staff will use a variety of questioning techniques to clarify further and identify specific needs and help enquirers and students to interpret more complex information.

   Guidance: is the process of supporting enquirers and students with more complex needs to explore issues that may present a barrier to successful study. Staff will empower enquirers and students to consider available options and collaborate with the student to reach decisions relevant to their circumstances. Guidance aims to facilitate learning and progression by advocating, challenging and referring to more specialist support, where appropriate.

1.2 Prospective and current Open University students come from a diverse range of backgrounds and display a varied range of educational experience. The IAG Service supports students in making decisions about Open University study and career planning, based upon individual needs, circumstances and interests. We place an emphasis on helping students make informed decisions about their studies by providing online information, advice and guidance that is easy to access, clear, relevant and up-to-date.

1.3 Our service is consistent with the agreed Open University approach to educational support and guidance, and is delivered in accordance with the principles of the nationally recognised matrix quality standard and the University’s Student Privacy Notice. We contribute to the University’s commitment to reach more students with life-changing learning that meets their needs and enriches society.
1.4 The IAG Service entitlements for enquirers and students is outlined in our Information, Advice and Guidance Statement of Service.

Policy

1. Aims, Objectives and our Commitments

1.1 We aim to provide an IAG Service which:

- respects the needs of the individual enquirer or student. As a service, our Information, Advice and Guidance is underpinned and informed by the open and distance learning model of The Open University;
- is targeted to the specific needs of enquirers and students at different stages of their studies with The Open University.

1.2 We aim to provide students with an impartial IAG Service which respects individual needs and supports informed course choice and decision making.

1.3 We are committed to developing the IAG Service through compliance with the external Quality Standard matrix, and via continuous improvement, including quality monitoring, quality initiatives, staff training and development.

1.4 We will:

   i) Take into account any concerns you may identify in relation to the IAG Service.
   ii) Record any necessary communication with you in our customer relationship database, regarding prospective/current study.

1.5 With regard to Data Protection:

   i) Information will be held in accordance with the University Student Privacy Notice.
   ii) When you contact The Open University, we will ask you to confirm some personal data before discussing your record.

1.6 The objectives of the IAG Service are to ensure that:

   i) You are empowered to achieve your study and career goals and to develop independence in your decision-making.
   ii) The IAG Service can support you if you have additional needs to enable you to overcome potential barriers to study.
iii) The IAG Service supports student success, progression and retention.

iv) The delivery of Information, Advice and Guidance is responsive to changes and developments within the University and in the external environment.

1.7 We will achieve these objectives by:

i) raising awareness of the IAG Service so that you know what you can expect and how to access it;

ii) providing you with timely and targeted information, advice and guidance at key points in your studies to support your study progress;

iii) ensuring, as far as possible, that our online information and advice is current, personalised, accessible, accurate and takes account of individual needs;

iv) providing opportunities for you to access information, advice and guidance through a variety of channels, including online discussion forums, email and telephone;

v) offering a range of opportunities to give feedback regularly on our IAG Service, and encouraging, and acting, on student and staff feedback;

vi) ensuring members of staff have opportunities for training, skills and knowledge development appropriate to their roles;

vii) monitoring and maintaining the IAG Service regarding the key skill sets required for an effective and responsive service;

viii) seeking to ensure the IAG Service explores and adopts innovative and digital technology as appropriate and relevant in line with University strategic plans;

ix) identifying key internal and external points of contact, such as staff in different departments, or external agencies, to inform and support the provision of Information, Advice and Guidance.

2. Students under the age of 18

2.1 The Open University has specific procedures in place to help children and young people who are considering applying to study according to the Admission of Applicants under the age of 18.

2.2 The University recommends that all applicants under the age of 18 have an appointed Advocate at the time they commence their studies in accordance with the Advocacy Policy.
3. Implementation and review

3.1 The implementation of the policy takes place through the delivery of Information, Advice and Guidance, and is evaluated through quality assurance mechanisms such as monitoring and evaluation, and accreditation to matrix, the national Quality Standard.

3.2 The policy will be reviewed every three years to ensure it remains appropriate and relevant to IAG Service delivery, quality assurance processes and alignment with key University and regulatory policies.

Glossary of terms

Enquirers
Individuals who are considering Open University study (and are seeking Information, Advice and Guidance to support making an informed decision).

matrix Quality Standard
The matrix Standard is a national quality standard which organisations use to assess and measure and improve their information, advice and support services.

Student progression and retention
The process of supporting student success through successful completion of assessment and the chosen programme of study within a specific timeframe. (Reference: Higher Education Academy Framework, as below.)

The Higher Education Academy Framework
Explaining student access, retention, attainment and progression: Access (across the student lifecycle), retention (completing a programme of study within a specific timeframe), attainment (cumulative achievements in HE and level of degree-class award) and progression in and beyond education are all components of student success. Success in each of these areas depends on the extent to which students are engaged, and their belonging is fostered within their programme and wider institution, across the whole student lifecycle.
